

Loxahatchee River Watershed Status Reuse Water Utilization and Availability

Maximizing the utilization of reuse water is a primary goal of all reuse providers. After all, the effort and expense already has gone into treating the water to the levels necessary for recycling, so optimizing that usage is only logical. Further, reuse water is certainly the preferred and far less expensive alternative for landscape irrigation when compared to potable water. Recently, we have been analyzing data from our reuse program and discussing this issue with colleagues in the industry. Our objective is to bring critical thinking and information to the regulatory agencies to help shape the future to take better advantage of this valuable resource. At our meeting we will share with you some of interesting and unexpected findings from our preliminary analysis.
