

Loxahatchee River Watershed Status Martin County's Kitching Creek Central Flow Way Restoration Project

Martin County recently completed an ambitious restoration project in one of the major tributaries into the Loxahatchee River. This project will provide important and valuable benefits for water quality and quantity for the River, habitat improvements, as well as public use amenities. At our meeting we will provide a brief summary of this extraordinary restoration project.

